

Come and Play in the Music Educators' Orchestra!

"Sustaining Music Development"

Calling all...

School teachers, instrumental teachers, university students, community musicians, music therapists, arts organizations... This is a creative orchestra open to people of all abilities, on any musical instrument, working across a range of musical genres and educational environments.

Dust off that old violin or take your playing to a new level!

Be a part of the music scene and see what other musicians are up to in Ireland today. Bring new ideas to your work and inspire others.

Learn new repertoire

New works commissioned especially for you to premiere!

"Open score" pieces (playable by any number of musicians of any ability)

"Miniatures" (including some pieces only a few seconds long!)

New arrangements of works by the great composers.

Compose and perform your own pieces!

Acquire new skills!

Get to grips with improvisation, music technology, new performance techniques and new music.

Pick up creative exercises that you can use in a wide range of educational settings.

For as many performers as possible
each player works through their material independently.

Discussion and reflection

Short talks will help put music education into context:

Where are composers coming from today?

What are the ideas and values behind their music?

What are the ideas and values of music education today?

Collaborations

Collaborate with some of Ireland's most exciting writers, visual artists, composers and performers.

Work together with other ensembles and organisations and be a part of something big!
